*Q.1 Explain and Details of Social work Methods.

Generally methods implies to systematic way of doing something. In social work, method is understood as the systematic and planned way of helping the people. The main concern of social work is to solve psycho-social problems of individual groups and communities through the conscious application of knowledge in methods, tools, techniques and skill of social work. Social work as a professional practice mainly uses the following methods while accomplishing its objectives:

- 1) Social case work.
- 2) Social group work.
- 3) Community organization.
- 4) Social work research.
- 5) Social welfare administration.
- 6) Social action.

The first three of the methods given below are known as the primary or direct methods. They are directly applied in the field situation among the people to solve their problems. The latter three are known as 'secondary' or indirect methods because they are involved indirectly by some specialized agencies or a set of organized people. These methods generally operate at the secondary levels but not with the people directly.

1. Social case Work :-

It is a primary methods of social work. It deals with individual problems through one to one relationship which is guided by professional knowledge of the social case worker. This method the case worker discovers different aspect aspects of the clients problems, prepares an appropriate treatment plan and finally with professional knowledge in social relationship tries to brings about ~~neeces~~ necessary changes in the attitude and behaviour of the client in favour of his own growth and development.

2. Social group Work :-

Social group work is another primary methods of social work. It is a process in which the individuals in a social group are helped by a professionally qualified worker. In this method the group worker uses a group and community as a potential tools for the positive change and personality development of individuals. The group work process they are helped to improves their relationship and personality traits which may help them to develop themselves and their community as whole.

3) Community Organization

Community organization as a method of social work is a process through which efforts are directed towards meeting the community needs by organizing human and material resources of the community. Identifying problems, finding resources relevant to their needs, developing and organizing inter-personal and inter-group relationship, planning and executing effective programmes activities are some of the specific activities in community organization method.

4) Social Welfare Administration :-

Social welfare administration is one of the secondary methods of social work. It refers to a process through which social policy is transformed into social service. Developing programmes, mobilizing resources, recruiting and involving suitable personnel, proper organization, coordination, providing skillful leadership supervision and guidance of staff, budgeting and evaluation are some of the specified activities involved in social welfare administration method.

5) Social Work Research :-

Social work research is another important methods of social work. Through this methods efforts are made to find answers to the existing and emerging problems of social work so as to make them use in the practical fields. Social work research like that of the other social sciences is contributing a lot of the store house of its knowledge and helping in the better planning and implementation of social work programme.

7) Social Action :-

Social action method of social work is the one that is used to bring about desirable changes in the defective system for ensuring social progress. Through this method attempts are made to mobilize people, to create awareness on existing problems, to organize them and to encourage them to raise their voice against undesirable practices which hampers their development and finally to create pressure for bringing about suitable legislation for social progress. This method seeks to relate the community needs with the solution of the problems mainly through collective initiatives.

1.2 Principles of Social Work?

There have been a variety of principles of social work put forward by various authors. However, the following are the most common to all authors.

- 1) Principle of Acceptance;
- 2) Principle of Individualization;
- 3) Principle of Self-Determination;
- 4) Principle of Non-Judgmental Attitude;
- 5) Principle of Confidentiality;
- 6) Principle of Controlled Emotional Involvement.

1) Principle of Acceptance:-

The client must accept the worker because the worker is assisting the client in overcoming his or her problem condition. In social work circumstances, the client may approach the social work directly, the agency may designate the social worker, or someone may refer the client to the social worker. Unless the client believes that the social worker has the capability to comprehend his/her predicament and is interested in assisting him/her in resolving the problem, the client may refuse to cooperate in the relationship in which the social work intervention is to be planned.

In their client's problems or becoming too objective. In the first example, the worker may over-identify with the client because they see many parallels between the client's problems situation and other life situations or with the client's personality. This could jeopardize the professional relationship as well as judgments regarding the client's issue.
